THE DOGS

Of Louisa Must Be Tagged, Says The City Council.

The Council met in regular session Tuesday night. The consideration of claims occupied the greater part of the session.

Marshal Stone reported over $1000 collected on taxes since the last meeting.

The Council ordered the immediate enforcement of the dog tax law. The Treasurer was ordered to buy 200 tags, and a reasonable time will be allowed for owners to buy these tags at $1 each and place them on their dogs. After the expiration of that time all dogs without tags will be placed in the stray pen for five days. If not claimed in that time the animals will be killed.

An order was made to have the sidewalk completed on Lock Avenue. This will connect the gap between the government property and R. S. Chaffin's place. John Crutcher recently set his fence in sufficiently and donated the ground, and C. P. Brouley and Dr. T. D. Burgess will do the same. This will be a great improvement.

The Improvement Committee was directed to put the streets into good condition, and they have already started the work.

A number of persons whom the Assessor had failed to assess were before the Council and listed their property.

Is Known In Louisa.

The many friends of S. B. Sims, the genial traveling man for Swift & Co., who makes this city his headquarters, will regret to learn of a mishap to him last night. He was coming down from Catlettsburg on a Camden Inter-State car, and in an effort to close a window, his right hand slipped and shot through the glass. A sliver of glass penetrated the palm of his hand, back toward the wrist, a distance of two inches, severing an artery. Much weakened from the loss of blood, he came to this city and received medical attention. The wound is a very painful and dangerous one, and may yet give him serious trouble. As it is, he will be off duty for some time.—Independent.

Won His Diploma.

Dr. Grover Meek is the way he now writes it, and he is justly entitled to this distinction. Having put in four years study at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, one of the high grade schools of this country, Dr. Meek successfully passed the rigid examination and received his degree. His many friends congratulate him and wish for him a large degree of success in his chosen profession.

Came to a Close.

The June term of the Lawrence Circuit Court came to a close this week. The grand jury reported 79 indictments. There were two convictions for felony, reported elsewhere in this paper. There was not much done this week, one jury being discharged Wednesday and the other yesterday. This session of the court marks the close of Judge Kinner's official term, and his successor has not been appointed.

The Flinch Club.

These ladies were guests of Mrs. F. L. Stewart last Thursday. As usual the afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed, the company, the surroundings and the refreshments offered being unexceptionable. The non-members present were Mrs. W. N. Sullivan, Mrs. Hannah Lackey and Mrs. A. M. Campbell and Mrs. P. S. Bond.

Big Sandy vs. the World.

Capt. S. A. Donnelly, of Louisville, tells a remarkable story of a race between a C. and O. train and a gray horse, starting at Pikeville, Ky., and ending six miles away. The horse won and came to grief through swerving into a wire fence. It must have been a blood relation of Jim Grubbs' colt. This is Captain Donnelly's story:

"Just after we left Pikeville the horse got on the track, and the engineer sounded a warning signal. As we were approaching a cattle guard the engineer slowed up, fearing the horse would fall into it, but the horse leaped over, and before he stopped vaulted across 11 other cattle guards and outran the train, which was not a slow one. All of the passengers soon ascertained what was transpiring, and many of them leaned out of the coach windows to see the race between the beast and the locomotive. Until the gray landed against a wire fence he was gaining on the train. I believe that gray horse, if he is not injured, can beat any of the steeple chase horses on the turf today."

Two Convictions.

There were two convictions for felonies at the present term of Circuit Court. In one of his prowling tours Charles Justice found it handy to break into Dave Ward's and abstract therefrom a pair of shoes. During a residence at the Capital the State will, for two years, furnish him not only shoes but caps and clothes free.

On the day of Scott Grubbs' funeral Dow McCoy and Willie Adams had a misunderstanding which resulted in Adams receiving a stab in his knee, the stabber being McCoy. For this the jury thought that one year in the pen would help to cure the knife habit, and it sentenced him accordingly.

Child Burned to Death.

In Fort Gay last week Fred Wilson's little boy, age two years, was burned so badly that death resulted the following day. The child was alone in a room for a few minutes and his dress caught fire. The flames did their work quickly, and although help arrived promptly the injuries sustained were sufficient to prove fatal.

The child was a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Harris, of Fort Gay. W. H. Harris, an uncle, came down from Matewan as soon as he heard of the accident.

This is a shocking kind of accident that calls forth sympathy from everybody, friends and strangers alike.

The Dams Are Up.

In answer to the repeated question, Why are not the dams raised, the response is that they are up, and have been nearly a month. The Louisa dam is not raised because it is disabled. In preparing plans and specifications for its repair it was sought to repair it in such a way that it would correspond, if this is the proper word, with the project for adding about 5 feet to the crest of the dam. We mean that as a measure of economy it was designed that the repair should be a part of the raise. We further learn that the iron work to be used in the repair of No. 3, the Louisa dam, should be ready in the contract time, that is, about July 20. So, if the stage of water is favorable the dam will be put in commission this season.

An Old Citizen Dead.

After a long and painful sickness, borne with patience and christian fortitude, Mrs. Julia Hale, widow of Henderson Hale, died yesterday morning, aged 70 years. She will be buried today at 1 p. m., with funeral services at the house and interment at Pine Hill.

Mrs. Hale was a most excellent woman, devoted to her children and in all respects worthy of the high esteem in which she was held. The children who mourn the loss of their aged parent are George, James and Bascom, of Louisa; Mont, of Central City, and Mrs. John Bradley, of this county.

A New Locality.

It is interesting to notice how the bridge enters into the ordinary affairs and talk of the town. It has sort of individuality, like the post-office, or the hotel, or the bank corner, Sullivan's, Pierce & Derrick's corner, and the like.

"How did you come over? On the bridge?" "Let's go down and see the bridge." "Where will you meet me? Oh, on the bridge." "Where did you go last night? Oh, on the bridge. Who was with you? John. And don't you ever tell a single soul, but he came awful near asking me to marry him! We're going down again tonight."

Autonomy in the Filipinos.

The subject of self-government for the Filipinos is treated in a very original, striking and logical way by our townsman, Lieut. P. S. Bond, U. S. Engineer in charge of the Big Sandy, in the article we produce below:

To the Editor of the Army and Navy Journal:

The question at issue in the editorial in your number of May 5, concerning the views of Mr. Bryan on our duty to the Filipinos, is, "Are the Filipinos fit for self-government?" I assert that there never existed on this earth a people who were not in the first place capable of governing themselves and working out their own salvation, even under difficulties of an appalling nature. The mere existence of nations proves this—not to mention the steady advance of civilization since the creation of man.

The lowest forms of thinking animals, the buffaloes of the plains, wild sheep, even wild geese, govern themselves most excellently. Shall it be said that man—the noblest of God's creations—is incapable of governing himself? The American Indians—that most primitive of peoples—governed themselves before the epoch-making advent of the white man. Perhaps their form of government was not ideal according to our (distorted?) views, but it suited them better than what they have had since. They were free, and freedom is better than chains, "though they be of gold."

A people learn self-government only by governing themselves, just as a boy becomes a man and learns a man's work only when he is thrown on his own resources and forced to assume duties and responsibilities. There are some things that can be learned only by experience, and self-government is unquestionably one of them. The world's most successful nations are those that have thrown off the yoke of the oppressor (be that oppressor a foreign power or an oligarchy at home), and set up a government for the people, by the people, and of the people. They passed through years of bloody strife, through frightful civil wars, and internal dissensions, and finally emerged triumphant. I cite England, France and America as conspicuous examples.

In every instance that history records government by a foreign power, when not resisted, has degraded the nation governed. Whether or not it be intended to eventually give a nation its freedom, the fact of a foreign government by force and its effect are not altered.

Now, what has been the (contrary) effect of self-government upon nations able or allowed to work out their own destinies? In every instance of any importance the nation and people have been elevated and enlightened.

A little over half a century ago the United States opened the door of Japan—a half civilized, heathen nation. We did not undertake to govern Japan for the Japanese, but left them to do as they saw fit. We saw—and their success is almost without parallel in history.

I cannot see the logic by which it is declared (in the article I am discussing) that it is our duty to leave the islands as we found them. According to the Journal's view (or any other honest view), we must do whatever is best for the islands. If the inhabitants of the northern and southern provinces are so different that they had better work out their destinies separately, then if we are to interfere at all (and we have done it), why not provide for this?

At the end of the Journal's article occur the statements, "If we . . . invoke the Monroe Doctrine to maintain their independence, the world would laugh at us" (to be sure), and again, "The idea that we can withdraw and still forbid other nations to enter is misleading and dangerous." In these statements I do not concur. Is the independence of Switzerland guaranteed by the Monroe Doctrine, or of Belgium, or Holland, or Denmark, or Spain, or any other free but individually helpless nation. And do the powers stay out because Uncle Sam forbids them to enter? Of course not, and yet these nations are secure in their independence. In looking around for a case more nearly parallel to what that of the Filipinos would be, the case of the Samoans occurs to my mind. Their independence is guaranteed by convention of 1889, to which England, Germany and the United States are parties. We do not invoke the Monroe Doctrine, nor do we (alone) forbid other powers to enter the Samoan Islands.

P. S. BOND.

Railway Consolidation.

The directors of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway of Kentucky, of the Kinneconick and Freestone Railroad and of the Big Sandy Railway Companies, met at the office of F. T. D. Wallace in Ashland Friday, to consolidate these three railroads. The Big Sandy railway is the new branch built from Whitehouse, Johnson county, Ky., through Floyd county to the mouth of Elkhorn, in Pike county, a distance of eighty-five miles. The Kinneconick and Freestone railroad is a little branch running out of Garrettsville from the Chesapeake and Ohio railway in Lewis county, a distance of nineteen miles to Carter, in Carter county. The C. and O. Railway Company of Kentucky includes the other railroads operated by the C. and O. Railway Company in the State of Kentucky.

By this consolidation all of the roads operated by the Chesapeake and Ohio railway in Kentucky will be consolidated into the C. and O. Railway Company of Kentucky, which is a separate and distinct corporation from the C. and O. Railway of Virginia. This consolidation was completed and went into effect the first day of June and is made by the written consent of nearly all of the stockholders of the three constituent companies forming the consolidation. The amount of the capital stock of the consolidated company will be $12,550,000 divided into shares, the par value of which will be $100 each. The new company will be conducted by a board of seven directors, the first board to be George W. Stevens, Decatur Axtell, H. T. Wickham, C. E. Wellford, G. B. Wall, F. T. D. Wallace and H. C. Boughton. The principal office of the corporation will be at Ashland.

Judge S. G. Kinner.

Many Years ago Girard Kinner came to Lawrence county in his official capacity of Commonwealth's Attorney. He held that position as long as he wanted it. At its close he came again. This time it was S. G. Kinner, Judge of the Lawrence Circuit Court, and in this responsible place he has sat for many years, meting out justice to high and low alike, holding the scales in even balance; deaf to all but what he deemed the law, blind to all save what he considered right. Judge Kinner has been the arbiter of the fate of many, and cases of great weight and moment have come before him in the Circuit Court of this county, but complaints of unfairness have been few indeed, if any. Courteous in manner, genial without undue familiarity, he is popular with our people. They part with him regretfully and hope that health and prosperity may attend him.

A Diploma Is Hers.

Miss Bessie Lee Snyder is home from Lexington, fresh from the classic shades of Campbell-Hagman College, and justly proud of the diploma granted to her, signifying that she has "fought the good fight, and finished the course." To extend the figure the NEWS hopes that there is laid up for her a crown of happiness to be enjoyed many, many years.

The First Over.

On Saturday morning, June 2nd, Mrs. Ella Hays, of Louisa; Mrs. R. C. Wolford, of Johnson City, Tenn., and Miss Lillian Haymes, of Danville, Va., had the honor of being the first ladies to cross the new steel bridge now being erected between Louisa and Fort Gay.

In Colored Society.

The swellest colored wedding that ever happened in these parts was that of Joe Fischer and Miss Belle Matney. The affair was pulled off at Lincoln Chapel, Pocahontas Avenue, Louisa, Ky., Wednesday evening, June 6th, at 8 o'clock sharp. The guests were so numerous that the church was overflowed into the streets. Racial distinction was not in evidence and the attendance was very much mixed.

About two weeks ago invitations were issued in due form and large numbers by the parents of the bride, to both white and colored people. The Alice Roosevelt wedding was reproduced as nearly as possible, even to the bridal costume, which was patterned after a picture published in the newspapers. The decorations of Lincoln Chapel were after a design printed in the Delineator and everything was up-to-date.

The groom was driven to the church in a carriage with his best man, and the bride and her maid followed behind two prancing white steeds. The necessary ushers and flower girl were on hands. The organist was somewhat late, but finally came and relieved the strain by substituting a few from Mendelssohn.

Rev. Riley, of the African Methodist Church, performed the ceremony according to the ritual, verbatim et literatim.

A reception at the residence of the bride's parents followed.

Good Show Coming.

Coming next Monday, June 11, is Jones' Enormous Shows, Menagerie and Wild West. This show comes highly recommended by the press to the cities visited by this monstrous aggregation. Some of the features are the Leap the Loop, the Lorenz troupe of European acrobats; the flying Cotter family and 100 other circus features, combined with an entire Wild West and Frontier exhibition, employing a tribe of twenty Sioux Indians, cowboys, cowgirls, scouts and rough riders.

A grand street review will take place at 11 o'clock on the day of the show and two performances will be given, two and eight p. m.

A Large Contract.

The Baker Contract Company, contractors on Levisa Lock No. 1, Big Sandy river, were the successful bidders on a large piece of work in New York State. The contract amounts to $1,500,000.

Mr. Baker has been very successful in handling contract work and we hope he may find this new job, (the largest he has had) as profitable proportionately as his smaller ones have been.

John M. Rice, of this place, who has held a responsible position with the company for quite a while, has been offered a place on the New York work and thinks of accepting it.

Work at Mouth of Big Sandy.

Plans and specifications for regulating works at the mouth of the Big Sandy river have been prepared and the work advertised for contract. Bids will be opened June 29. The work will consist of two parallel concrete walls in prolongation of the walls of Lock No. 1, and extending over a portion of the distance between said lock and the Ohio river. This work will be done under an appropriation of $40,000 carried in the River and Harbor act of March 3, 1905.

With Distinction.

Miss Emma Wallace has returned from Barboursville, where she has graduated in stenography and typewriting. The highest marks in the class were given to Miss Wallace, and she has the enviable record of completing the course in three months, the shortest period known.

There is a saying used whenever a Saadian attains distinction. You all know what it is. Please say it now.

Home Again.

Mrs. Ben Thomas and Miss Heloise have returned to Louisa, having arrived Tuesday evening. Mr. Thomas is expected tomorrow. These people have been greatly missed, and they are gladly welcomed back to permanent residence. Mr. Thomas will retain his position in the U. S. Engineer office in Cincinnati, but the nature of his duties is such that he can be in Louisa almost as much as in any other place.

Take Care of the Students.

Louisa people should make up their minds to help take care of students who come to the Kentucky Normal College (this year). They should do this even at a sacrifice. The first year of the school will demand sacrifices on the part of all of us, because it will be almost impossible to provide buildings sufficient to house those who will come in here. Our homes must be opened to the students if necessary at prices which they can afford to pay, regardless of whether there is a profit in it or not.

APPROPRIATION

For Big Sandy River to Make Up Deficiency.

As announced in the NEWS last week the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill as reported to Congress carries $40,000 for Big Sandy river.

This sum is to make up a deficiency of like amount in former appropriations. It is to be expended upon the general project for "improving Big Sandy River." This project, at present, provides for the completion of Lock No. 1, Tug fork, Lock No. 1, Levisa fork, and the raising of the crest of dam No. 3, Main river, (at Louisa) to 535.2 feet. (It is now 530.7 feet.) As the two locks on the forks are nearly completed, and as some funds still remain, exclusive of the $40,000, it is probable that all of the $40,000 will be available for raising the crest of No. 3. This has been roughly estimated to cost $50,000, but no plans have ever been made. None of the money is available for raising the crest of No. 3 until the locks on the forks are finished. Hence the engineers cannot even draw plans for raising No. 3 until the others are done. This in accordance with the wording of the acts of Congress.

It is through the courtesy of Lieut. P. S. Bond, engineer in charge here, that we are enabled to give this information.

Ollapodrida.

PLEASE BE CAREFUL.

The streptococcus pyogenes, the staphylococcus pyogenus, aureus, the staphylococcus pyogenus albus, the potus vulgaris, the bacillus urae, the bacillus butyricus, the bacillus coli communis and the micrococcus acid are the alarming names of microbes found in the dust of the street, that are likely to gain a resting place on the food we eat when it is displayed on open market stands. The microbes are not as dangerous to health as their names imply, but as they are generated in filth, they are not what the young woman of the period would class as nice, and it is highly desirable to take as few into the system as possible.

Paris, Ky., policeman arrested a negro carrying a sack which contained seven hams, six shoulders, four chickens and a rabbit. Thus ended the fake of the hind leg mascot.

OLIVE HILL SOCIETY.

John Ratcliff has returned to Portsmouth where he was married to Beatha Justice of that place. Poor little maid, cheer up. The loss of one is the gain of two.

Many years ago a book was kept at Mammoth Cave in which distinguished visitors were expected to write their names and also to record, briefly, their impressions of the big hole in the ground. On the occasion of Thackeray's visit he penned a glowing apostrophe to the cave. It so happened that a certain Tennesseean saw the lines, and wrote below them as follows:

Mammoth Cave, O what a spot!
In summer cold, in winter hot.
Mammoth Cave, O what a wonder!
General Jackson, hell and thunder.

Will Drill For Oil.

The Standard Oil Company, under the name of the New Beach Oil and Gas Company, will start operations in the vicinity of the town of Blaine, this county, at once. The contract for hauling the machinery and supplies to that place has already been made.

The Standard has before drilled some test wells in that section, but is evidently not satisfied with the former investigation.

Spain's day of joy following the marriage of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria, of Battenberg, was abruptly ended by the work of the bomb-thrower, whose well directed missile fell near the royal coach and cost sixteen lives. The King and his bride escaped through the agency of an electric wire, which deflected the bomb. The police arrested Manuel Duran, from whose room the missile, concealed in a bouquet, was thrown.

Clerks of United States Courts appear to have no difficulty in accumulating fortunes from positions not regarded as unusually lucrative, according to Department of Justice officials who appeared before the House Committee on Appropriations. Attention was called to Mr. Fennell, who holds eight separate appointments as Clerk to the Federal Courts in Kentucky. He has four appointments as Clerk of the District Court and four as Clerk of the Circuit Court. He is entitled to draw a salary of $28,000 a year, if the fees aggregate that sum, before the Government gets a cent.

The postoffice at Dover was entered by burglars last Monday night. The large safe was blown open with nitroglycerin and the big double doors blown into smithereens. One of the hinges to the door was blown through a counter on the opposite side of the room and struck the brick wall with such force that it rebounded over the counter and fell in the middle of the floor in a heap. The burglars secured $125 cash and $140 in stamps and escaped toward Cincinnati on a headcar, upon which they came to town. There were three in the party. —Bracken Kentuckian.

Cynthiana, Ky., May 31.—Workmen engaged in repairing the cell occupied by Curt Jett in the county jail discovered that two iron bars had been placed with wood. The wood was painted the color of the bars and made the same shape so that detection had not been made until scraped for painting. When the wood was removed an opening was made large enough for a man to pass through. This cell was occupied by Jett and White during their exciting trial two years ago, and Jett was placed in it when brought from the penitentiary at Frankfort several months ago to stand trial for the murder of Tom Cockrell. Authorities are of the opinion that the wood was placed in the bars when the jail was built and that Jett had no knowledge of it being there. Jett's trial is set for next Monday. Special Judge Botts, of Owenton, will preside.

Washington, June 1.—The Campaign Committee of the National Democratic Congressional Committee and a sub-committee from the National Committee met here for conference in the rooms of the Congressional Committee. Every member of the Campaign Committee, with the exception of two, was present. After the conference, which lasted for nearly three hours, and which was for the purpose of talking over plans for the coming campaign and harmonizing any differences, if any were found to exist between the two committees, the conference adjourned with utmost harmony between the two bodies of the Democratic party.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., June 1.—One of the most interesting relics of bygone days which will be seen at the Home Coming in Louisville is an old flintlock musket, owned by Col. J. W. Jones, of Powell county. The musket is over 150 years old and is in an excellent state of preservation. It was made in England and was brought to this country by a British soldier, who used it in the Revolutionary War. The next heard of it was used in the battle of Waterloo. The weapon was then evidently in peace for some time, and was used again in the war with Spain and Mexico. It was next used in the battles between Mexico and Texas, when a Mexican soldier carried it. At the battle of Cerro Gordo, when the United States soldiers and the Santa Anna men fought for supremacy, the gun was captured by Gen. Winfield Scott.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., June 1.—The Snyder Construction Company with capital of $10,000 was formed to-day. The company will engage in building railroads, coal mines, etc. The main office will be at Morehead, Rowan county.

Maysville, Ky., May 31.—Thomas Kerr Ricketts died at his home here last night of general debility. He was born June 1, 1809, near this city, making him the oldest native-born inhabitant of Mason county at the time of his death. He was, up to a few years ago, one of this city's most prominent business men. He has two daughters.

"The Democrats will make the tariff and public corruption the leading issues in the fight this fall to gain control of the Sixtieth Congress," said Representative David E. Finley, of South Carolina. "They will demand a revision of the Dingley schedules where those schedules have fostered monopoly and where they have robbed the people of this country in the interests of the few. Our own industries should not be allowed to sell to other countries cheaper than they sell here. The Republicans are urging the passage of a ship-subsidy bill, but they do not stop to think that much of the loss to our merchant marine is due to the fact that ships can be made so much cheaper across the water than here because of the cheaper materials.

"The Democrats will demand the passage of reciprocity treaties also. Throughout the entire country the people are aroused over the inequities of the Republican tariff and wish that as the principal issue, I believe we can carry the House."

Washington, June 1.—Robert Adams, of the Second Congressional district, of Pennsylvania, died at the Emergency Hospital, in this city, at 11:30 o'clock this morning as the result of a pistol shot fired through his mouth into his head with suicidal intent. The act was committed some time between 6 and 7 o'clock this morning at the club chambers of the Metropolitan Club, where Mr. Adams had resided for several years. It was not until 8 o'clock, however, that he was found by Horace Clark, one of the negro bellmen, whose habit it was each morning to carry hot water to the room. Upon opening the door Clark found Mr. Adams entirely nude, sitting upright in an arm chair. He immediately summoned the attaches of the house, and a doctor at once was sent for. Mr. Adams then was unconscious, and the physician who was summoned pronounced the wound necessarily fatal. Mr. Adams was soon afterward removed to the hospital in a patrol wagon, where the bullet and some fragments of the bone were removed from his brain.

The Deepwater Railroad.

The mystery of the Deepwater railroad, building through the two Virginias, is no longer such. The rumor that this mysterious railroad was the property of Henry H. Rogers has been verified. The building of this great steel highway has attracted little outside attention despite its importance. For instance, it is not generally known that 5,000 men are daily at work in West Virginia in the building of the Deepwater & Tidewater Railroad which is being constructed between the New River and Pocahontas coal fields to Norfolk, Va., a distance of about 400 miles. About $1,250,000 is being expended every month in this construction.

It took the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad thirty years, backed by the state of West Virginia and Collis P. Huntington, to cross the Appalachian range, and it took the Baltimore & Ohio about as long, but the Deepwater & Tidewater railroad, being backed by Henry H. Rogers, expects to accomplish the feat in three years' time.

It is expected that the line will be completed by December 1, 1907, at a cost of $20,000,000, or $50,000 per mile, and the most remarkable thing about the whole enterprise is the fact that to date not a bond or certificate of stock has been issued, and outside banking interests have not been called upon to contribute a dollar of financial assistance.

The building of this railroad is probably the most remarkable engineering feat in railroad construction since the building of the trans-continental road across the Sierra Nevada Mountains. It is the first great new trunk line constructed in the United States for many years. It is the only trunk line that has ever been projected to run from starting point to destination without the slightest reference to towns and cities in the interior. Throughout its entire length there will be no grades more than 7½ feet to the mile excepting 8 miles across the Alleghenies where there is a maximum grade of 25 feet. This road is probably destined to be the greatest coal carrying road in existence. (It should be the greatest—measured by low cost of transportation and economy in operation.)

Gossip From The State Capital.

Frankfort, June 1.—Senator James B. McCreary, evidently somewhat stirred by the work of the Beckham men to capture his seat, is addressing letters to Democratic office holders and voters throughout the commonwealth declaring that he is a candidate to succeed himself and that he will be in Kentucky shortly to prosecute his campaign in person. He says that almost without exception Kentucky has endorsed her Senators with a second term. He says he has been faithful and loyal to the people and has devoted himself to a study of public questions. He takes occasion to point out the fact that he was the Chairman of the Democratic state campaign when Governor Beckham was landed a winner over John W. Yerkes and adds that he has never failed to take off his coat for the Democratic party when the party was in need. His letter is really an appeal for his friends in every county to stand by and support Senators and Representatives who will vote for him for re-election.

Politicians from the Tenth Congressional District say that Representative F. A. Hopkins will not seek a renomination. Nearly every country in the district has a candidate, but thus far Judge John E. Cooper, of Mt. Sterling, appears to be the most active. A convention will be held in July to make the nomination. With Mr. Hopkins out several new faces will appear in the next congressional delegation from Kentucky. Mr. Smith, of the Fourth; Mr. Trimble, of the Seventh; Mr. Gilbert, of the Eighth, and Mr. Hopkins, of the Tenth, are four Democrats who will be missed on the minority side. Mr. Smith is now serving his fifth term in the House, and is the dean of the state delegation.

Every effort is being made by friends of the state administration to prevent Henry B. Hines and J. Morgan Chittam from seeking the same nomination on the Democratic state ticket. Both are aspirants for the Auditorship, and both are close friends of Governor Beckham. It is claimed that if both should decide to fight the race to a finish the administration forces would be divided, and Henry Bosworth, who, while not an anti-administration man at all, is regarded as an outsider, would be sure to nab the nomination. The situation is one of considerable gravity, and will have to be solved before many days pass.

The names of two well-known Democrats are being mentioned here as probable candidates for nomination for office in the State primary election scheduled to be held this fall. They are State Senator J. W. Cammack, of Owen county, and Rolla K. Hart, of Fleming county. Senator Cammack is considered a probable starter in the race for Lieutenant Governor, and Mr. Hart in the race for Clerk of the Court of Appeals. Both are well and favorably known over the State. Senator Cammack led the fight for the county unit local option measure. Mr. Hart is a member of the present State Board of Equalization. He has long been identified with Democratic politics in the Ninth district.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Ring City, N. Y. The sample bottle is sold by all good druggists.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Ladies, see those new shirt waist sets at Kilmer's store. They are beauties.

John C. New, of Indiana, long one of the most influential Republicans in the United States, died in Indianapolis.

Foster Dwight Coburn, an agriculturist, has been appointed by Governor Hoch, of Kansas, to succeed Burton, resigned.

United States Senator John R. Burton, of Abilene, after a conference with several close friends, placed his resignation in the hands of Gov. Hoch.

Carefully collected reports indicate that the winter wheat yield this year will be at least fair. Only a wet harvest season remains as a possible drawback.

A reception to be given in honor of W. J. Bryan on his return from abroad, is expected to become a national affair, with delegates from all States present.

Frank H. Dudley, one of the best known men in this section of the short illness, at his home in Winchester, aged seventy-five years. He was a Mason of high degree.

In his will, which was filed for probate in Lexington, Maj. B. G. Thomas directs that his old negro housekeeper, to whom he left almost his entire estate, be buried in his family lot in the Lexington cemetery.

Two regiments of Ohio troops are guarding the mines in the vicinity of Plum Run, where a clash took place between strikers and mine guards, in which ten men were wounded. The situation was quiet at all the mines last reports.

For the third time since the murder of the Carter children, J. G. Rawlings and his sons, Milton and Jesse, and Alf Moore, colored, were sentenced at Valdosta, Ga., to be hanged. The date fixed is Friday, July 13, 13 and Friday will settle it.

Manuel Morales, the Spaniard suspected of throwing the bomb at the King Alfonso-Queen Victoria wedding procession, shot a guard who attempted to arrest him on a public road and then ended his own life. King Alfonso expects further attempts at assassination.

As will be seen from a Washington dispatch, elsewhere in this number, the Government is to permit the unbridled manufacture and sale of alcohol—Up River Ex.

This would be important, if true. You go into the unbridled manufacture and sale of alcohol and see how quickly the revenue man will pay you a visit.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, has come to realize that there is little hope for the Republican ticket in Pennsylvania this year unless its candidates are a little more decent than usual. He is therefore in frequent communication with the President and hopes that the White House will not only give its support to the ticket, but will make suggestions as to the nominees next Wednesday.

Members of the House Committee on Appropriations have been surprised to learn that the appropriation of $1,500,000 for the new building for the Department of Agriculture has been exhausted and only two wings of the structure have been completed. It was stated in committee yesterday that the law had been plainly disregarded. Secretary Wilson is said to be responsible for the existing situation.

The only surprising feature of this case is that the House Committee should have been "surprised."

The Elizabethtown News stands sponsor for this:

Dr. Virgil White, the veterinary surgeon of near town, relates an incident of remarkable early fecundity in bovines. Several years ago he possessed a cow which calved at the age of eleven months and seven days gave birth to a well-developed calf. Dr. White is of the opinion that this breaks the record in early births among cattle and challenges any bovine historian to produce a similar or earlier birth.

The NEWS refers the above to the consideration of its farmer readers, expressing the opinion by way of explanation of the phenomenon that it never occurred.

Having found that they had picked up a hot brick, the Republican Senators dropped the Jim-crow amendment out of the Rate Bill with a dull and sickening thud.

Later reports indicate that the Americans may have been the aggressors in the deadly outbreak in Mexico. Thirty-five Mexicans were killed to six Americans. No further trouble is expected and both Governments view the affray in a conciliatory light.

Friends of Harry V. McChesney, Secretary of State, say in Frankfort that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Auditor. Three candidates are now in the race and the entrance of Mr. McChesney would further complicate the contest.

In a signed statement from James D. Phelan, chairman of the Financial Relief Committee, it is shown that the money sent to San Francisco from outside points aggregated about $4,000,000 instead of $15,000,000, as previously stated by others.

This very condition of Graft and Trusts and Railroad Rebates over which President Roosevelt is now so indignant, was denounced by William Bryan years ago, and he was jeered at. General Miles exposed the rottenness of embalmed beef and the packers, and if his enemies had dared he would have been court martialled and dismissed from the army.

President Roosevelt Monday sent to Congress the report of Messrs. Reynolds and Nelth, the special commissioners appointed to investigate conditions in the Chicago packing houses. The President, in commenting on the report, says the conditions shown are revolting and the report shows the need of immediate action by Congress in the way of providing drastic and thorough-going inspection by the Federal Government of all stockyards and packing houses. The report after being read in the House was referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

Arthur Pue Gorman, United States Senator from Maryland, died suddenly at his residence in Washington Monday at 9:05 o'clock. While the Senator had been ill for many months, he had shown some improvement lately. Heart trouble was the immediate cause of death.

For practically half a century he had been conspicuous in public life, rising, through many adversities, to an eminence which commanded the respect of men of all political parties. He was recognized as a masterful political leader, an able statesman and a valuable public man, and it is generally conceded that his death leaves a big gap in the United States Senate. He held many subordinate positions in Washington, and they proved stepping stones to a power such as few other men in American life have wielded.

We are informed that the Congressmen of the districts touching Big Sandy river are looking after the matter of further appropriations for this stream. It is very much to be hoped that the next Rivers and Harbors bill will contain a liberal appropriation for continuing improvement of Big Sandy and its two forks. The project has progressed almost far enough to reach some of the coal veins that may be profitably mined. A strong fight has been necessary all along to succeed in this enterprise and it is not yet time to relax our efforts. The pressure for rivers and harbors appropriation is so great that only those who have a good case and fight for it to the last ditch. The fact that railroads have been built up these valleys is no good reason why we should lose interest in the slackwater project. There will be transportation enough to keep all these facilities busy. The river will insure reasonable rates to the public. It will make possible many enterprises not otherwise feasible. Monopoly has not the same chance with a river as with a railroad. Keep up interest in the river improvement.

Concerning a former well known citizen, Sam Doc Smith, the Ceredo Advance drops into rhyme:
S. D. Smith, who is widely known,
Has into the poultry business devotedly gone;
He bids fair to be one of our best poultry men,
And he knows the good points of a cock or hen.
If he could tell you how easily chickens were raised,
You would be astonished as well as amazed.
But would frankly tell you without hesitation,
The incubator is really a warm proposition.

PIERCE & DERRICK,

BARGAIN

THE FARM.

Regularity is perhaps more important in feeding sheep than any other animals, for they are naturally regular in their habits.

With all classes of stock the value of the feed is the same, whether it is supplied to the scrawniest of scrubs or the list of full bloods.

The calf that is not vigorous is not worth raising, and no time should be spent, nor food wasted, in trying to coax him along. He will be unsatisfactory when he is grown.

Mutton breeds of sheep do not depend on waste lands and hillsides to become profitable. Good sheep require good pastures, and pay well. Wool is simply a product of the sheep, and no farmer can make sheep pay who depends on wool only for his profit.

The most important thing connected with the work of the sheep breeder is the selection of the rams from which to breed. Never under any consideration breed from a scrub, a grade or an inferior ram; for in doing this you do your flock and yourself an irreparable injury.

Not long since mutton was anything but a popular dish with the American consumer; now it is found on many tables. Especially in the East it is a favorite. New York consumes 80,000 carcasses weekly. Boston is the heaviest consumer of mutton on basis of population in the world, while Philadelphia is a close second.

Horses which are inclined to be balky should never be overloaded, for in most cases that is just what makes them balky. A horse is soon spoiled if you go at it right. If you want to spoil a horse all you have to do is to overload and if on soft ground so much the better. Work all horses with care and load with judgment.

It is a pretty good plan not to pet the bull. He should have a feeling of respect for the keeper which is not found in an animal that gets much petting. Remember that for ages he has been the guardian of the herd and his fighting instinct has been bred down by domesticating him, but a trace of it still lurks in his nature, and is apt to spring into life at the most unexpected moments. It is a pretty safe theory to be on your guard with every bull.

The first calf of a heifer is not likely to be as good as the calves which follow. The rule is that the best calf comes from the mature cow. Many believe in this view so much that they invariably part with the first calf.

A sure sign of improved farming is the growing of many kinds of grasses. This is one of the best ways of making two blades of grass grow where only one grew before. By this way the land becomes more fully occupied than it would be otherwise, each kind finding just the place needed. When orchard grass, for instance, is sown alone it is very apt to grow in bunches, and the vacant places between these bunches, unless seeded with clover or other grasses, will be occupied by weeds.

It is regarded as a bad plan to turn live stock on clover in the early stages of its development. This young growth is needed to give the proper strength to the plant, and there is at the age very little nourishment in it for the stock.

There is not thought to be much reason for preferring eggs with dark colored shells. The choice is, however, said to be correctly founded by those who have studied the subject. Certainly some breeds produce shells of a dark color, just as others produce those that are light. And then, it is the fact that much of the flavor depends on the character of the food. The best flavor is caused by making grain the staple diet.

The way in which one part of Nature may have to depend on another was very strikingly brought out in the Australian experience with red clover.

This plant, "when introduced into Australia, it was found to be a failure, but produced no seed. The reason for this was ascertained to be the absence of bumble-bees.

The bumble-bee does the fertilizing almost exclusively on red clover. The bees were introduced and the clover went to seed all right. A like experience was had with apples."

Every progressive farmer likes suggestions and information on the subject of taking care of chickens. Experiences are thus always in order for some one in this class.

Thus we give the views of one long and successful in the business regarding the feeding of cracked wheat to them. It is thus believed that some of it can advantageously be allowed to chicks even before they are a week old. It is the best exercise their digestive organs can have. Whole wheat will be eaten when the chicks are ten days old, and ought always to form a part of their ration. It is especially valuable to make them feather quickly, the grain containing just the kind of material necessary for feather production.

All the most valuable practices in farming are acquired gradually. Little by little on the way we gather up the information needed and make it count. Thus beginners especially have many items of this kind to gather. It is, therefore, in order to give the experiences of an old farmer in dealing with live on livestock.

He had some fine Poland-China swine, and he was under the necessity of putting them in a shed and lots which were known to be literally alive with this kind of vermin. The story of the transaction is told in this way:

"The brood-sows and pigs were not in the place long before I could see the lice crawling all over them—so much that I noticed the poor animals had rubbed the hair off in a number of places.

"This was the condition that had to be dealt with. I knew that a hog-house could not live in coal oil one second. Hence the can of coal oil was taken, and when the hogs were feeding a stream of it was poured on them from the top of their heads to the roots of their tails, arranging for the greatest quantity to strike them where they had more lice. It was amusing to see the hogs go to their rubbing places and rub. The hogs put the oil on rubbing places, and so all the vermin got destroyed."

FACTS ABOUT ANGORA GOATS.

Editor Southern Agriculturist: In complying with your request, and also the request of some of your readers, for an article on Angoras, I will try to give a brief history of my experience with them.

In the first place, after reading about them in farm papers, I sent to Representative in Congress, and had him send me the Government book on Angora Goats. It costs nothing, and every man contemplating raising Angoras should read it. After reading it, I decided to try it, and I find the raising of them to be profitable.

Now, to the readers' questions. He asks how many would do well on three acres of broom sage and sweet gum and black gum sprouts. That depends entirely on the amount of grass and sprouts that grow on the three acres. If it is a perfect wilderness try twelve head, and I think you will find them sufficient to keep down your three acres. A farmer should not consider that for goats to keep his place free from sprouts and filth is the only benefit derived from them. Of course they will do that, but you can starve a goat to death as well as any other animal. Goats respond to good treatment the same as any other stock.

Question 2. How many kids do the does have at a time, and how many times a year?

Angoras almost invariably have but one at a time, and only one time a year. In case they lose their kid in the spring, then sometimes they will have one in the fall. I have had but one set of twins dropped in four years out of sixty odd heads of kids.

Question 3. About how heavy are they when grown?

The government book gives the average weight of Angoras at sixty-five pounds, but some are a good deal heavier than that. The does weigh about sixty-five to seventy pounds, and the bucks weigh about ninety to one hundred pounds.

Question 4. How do you sell them when large enough to ship? About how old are they when full grown?

Kids are old enough to ship at four to five months old. They sell at from $10 to $25 per pair, and some even higher. The prize buck at Kansas City in 1900 brought $1,050, and was bought by a woman. In 1901, the prize buck brought $1,600. Angoras do not get full grown till they are two years old.

Question 5. Sale of mohair.

As there are so few Angoras in Tennessee we have no mohair dealers, so have to ship it to other States. I have a good old Tennessee head as many as 50,000 Angoras, yes, 20,000, we would have a market for mohair at home.

Question 6. Do the kids have many enemies to destroy them?

Angoras are more delicate than scrub goats, therefore have to have more attention at kidding time. They should have a good warm place to kid in, if the weather is bad. Keep the kids up till they are two or three weeks old, then they will go it all right.

Question 7. Can you find sale for all you can raise?

Certainly, and could sell ten where I raise one. The thing to do is to raise the Angoras, and you will find a market for them, or rather the buyers will find you. I would advise the farmers of the South to get a few and try them. I think you will find them as profitable as any live stock you can have. If they only clear our lands of sprouts, they will pay us for our investment. I have always been able to realize 35 per cent on the investment. What other stock will beat it? W. L. BRIAN.

$100 REWARD, $100.

THE HOUR OF DEATH.

What ever else we may escape, the sponge will be pressed to our lips. I sometimes have a curiosity to know how I will behave when I come to die. Whether I will be calm or excited. Whether I will be filled with recollection or anticipation. I can not say, but come to the point we must in the six thousand years that have passed only two persons have gotten into the eternal world without death, and I do not suppose that God is going to send a carriage for us with horses of flame to draw us up the steps of heaven. But I suppose we will have to go like the preceding generations. An officer of the future world will knock at the door of our hearts and serve on us the writ of possession and we will have to surrender, and we will wake up after these winter, spring, summer and autumn stories have vanished from our vision. We will wake up into a realm which has only one season and that is the season of everlasting love to those that served God.

Though some will say I don't want to break out from my present associations; it is so chilly and so damp to go down the stairs of that vault.

If there were only some way of breaking through the partition between this world and the world to come without tearing this body to pieces. If the surgeons and doctors of this world could compound a mixture by which our soul and body could be kept together it would be done, but there is no escape from the separation.

A great many people tumble through the gates of the future and we do not know where they have gone, and they only add gloom and mystery and wonder to us, but our dear Christ so mightily stormed the gates of that future world that they have never since been closely shut.

Christ knows what it is to leave this world, the beauty of which He was more appreciative than we ever could be. He knows the beauty of the sea; He trod it. He knows the glories of the midnight heavens, for they were the spangled covering of His wilderness pillow. He knows about the Hilles; He twisted them into his sermon. He knows about the fowl of the air; they whirled their way through His discourse. He knows about the sorrows of leaving this beautiful world; not a light was kindled in the darkness for Him. He died without a physician; He died in cold sweat, dizziness, hemorrhage and agony that have put Him in sympathy with all the dying. He goes through it's old world and gathers up the souls out of all the death pillows, and puts them under his own head; He gathers on his own tongue the burning thirsts of many generations. The sponge is soaked in the sorrow of those who have died in their beds as well as soaked in the sorrows of those who perished in icy or fiery martyrdom. While heaven was pitying and earth was mocking our dear Lord died. Adam Hamman.

A REAL DAUGHTER OF THE REVOLUTION

By CAROLINE GEBHARDT.

Copyright, 1902, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Story opens on Ellery plantation in South Carolina in time of American revolution. Col. Bessemer and British dragoons arrive and ask accommodation of Miss Jane Ellery, the absence of her father and mother who are soldiers. During breakfast the officers are disturbed by Ellery, and an American officer dashes through the lines and disappears in the woods.

CHAPTER II.—Storm delays departure of British soldiers. Col. Bessemer is quite willing to remain in the company of Miss Ellery. During dinner a strange figure with black face and covered with long coat, enters dining-room and gives Miss Ellery a note.

CHAPTER III.—British officers started by appearance of a stranger, but did not recognize in him Capt. Worthington, who they much wished to capture. He was a patriot lover of Miss Ellery. That night the British were attacked at the Ellery plantation, and many of them killed and wounded.

CHAPTER IV.—Miss Ellery starts on a visit to her aunt, a patriot. Capt. Worthington meets her on the road. They quarrel because of his night attack on her guests at her home which was led by him. He tells her that Col. Bessemer is the cause of his engagement to her.

CHAPTER V.—Capt. Worthington presents Miss Ellery from falling into a trap set for the British by the wicked plot of being a party to the wicked plot, and ordered him never to visit her again. Two months later Col. Bessemer and his dragoons, among the officers of which was her brother, again visited her home during the presence of her father and her mother.

CHAPTER VI.—Col. Bessemer proposes to Miss Ellery and is to have his answer later—possibly when he has returned from a campaign against Col. Sumter.

CHAPTER VII.—Bessemer surprises Ellery's friends and captures a number of them. In the evening he and his troops return to the Ellery plantation where a mysterious prisoner of some rank is lodged in the house for safe keeping. The officers entertain the loyalists of the neighborhood at a ball in the evening. One of the guests tells Bessemer of Worthington's love for Miss Ellery.

CHAPTER VIII.—While Bessemer is securing Miss Ellery of being in love with a rebel his soldiers bring in another captive whom she recognizes as Capt. Worthington.

CHAPTER IX.

THE PLEA.

The prisoner heard her exclamation. His quick glance took in her figure and that of her escort. A frown settled upon his handsome brow and his lips set in a firm line of anger. As they advanced, he drew himself up between his captors and made a stately but freezing abstinence to the lady.

"What is the meaning of this disturbance?" Bessemer demanded of the sergeant in charge of the soldiers.

"This is the rebel, sir," the man answered, saluting, "upon whose trail you sent us. We captured him some miles back and were bringing him into camp, but when we reached the gate yonder he broke away from us."

"Well," Bessemer inquired sharply, "what did you find on him? Anything?"

"I searched him as soon as we captured him," the sergeant answered, "but could find no papers."

Bessemer tapped his foot upon the ground and studied a moment. "Doubtless," he said at last, "he carries his dispatches in his head instead of in writing. You come from Gen. Gates, I believe?" He turned to the prisoner.

"Indeed?" the other responded, with an interrogatory inflection.

"Bearing messages to Col. Sumter?"

"Ah?"

Bessemer's black eyes flashed angrily. "No insolence, sir. I recognize you now. Unless I mistake greatly, you are one of those arch conspirators who last month hung three of his majesty's most loyal servants. The leader of your band is in my hands, a prisoner. He hangs at sunrise. You hang with him, save on one condition only—that you reveal within the hour the contents of those dispatches, be they written or verbal, which you were conveying from Gen. Gates to Col. Sumter. On those terms alone will I spare your life; indeed, it is a piece of clemency in which I am scarce warranted."

"Col. Bessemer's reputation for mercy is world renowned. His 'quarter' hath become a household word. Of like fame are the honorable terms he ever offers those who have that which he would wish to purchase. 'Tis strange so few honest men take advantage of such magnanimity."

The mocking bow matched the mocking words. Bessemer's fury came near choking him. Jane half started forward, as though she would save the reckless American from his own mad folly—then checked herself.

"Enough. Sergeant, take him to the house by the back way. Have him securely locked in some upper room and well guarded until I can find time to deal with him. Dear lady," he added, turning to Jane with softened tone, as the soldiers obeyed his orders, "I most humbly crave your pardon for this unseemly interruption. Let us dismiss it from our minds and take up our discourse."

"Nay," Jane answered in a low voice, "I have eyes fronted and filled, 'first tell me that you did not mean your threat to hang Capt. Worthington if he does not give you the information you desire, a thing he will never do if he possesses any. I am sure, however, you do not mean to hang him. It was but a ruse, was it not, to induce him to speak a mere bit of play?"

"A bit of play, madam, which will cost Capt. Worthington his neck. He is a troublesome fellow whom I have long wished to be rid of; a pestiferous gadfly, ever buzzing around and annoying our troops. Besides, he is a cold-blooded murderer, well deserving of his fate. Nay, he shall hang by the side of his fellow-knave, and soon, at that."

"Oh, you cannot mean it," Jane cried. "Surely, surely you are only saying it to—to appall me."

"And is your interest, then, so great in this rebel?"

"My interest is great in anyone who is the subject of injustice. It is enough that you should hang that poor old gentleman who to-day had the misfortune to become your prisoner, but that you should contemplate hanging a man whom you have sent out your scouts, your spies, to hunt down, and who has not even an incriminating paper upon his person, that is passing all bounds! I cannot believe that the king would approve of having his cause sullied by such acts."

"You speak with most surprising ardor, madam," Bessemer remarked, his face black with passion, "but permit me to advise you that his majesty the king wisely leaves such matters to the judgment of his trusted officers, well understanding that an unscrupulous foe must be dealt with in a manner befitting the method of his warfare."

"Unscrupulous foe as you may term them," Jane answered, "I have yet to learn when the American forces have ever treated an honorable prisoner of war in so summary manner. The three Tories, whom they hung were not, as you well know, real soldiers. They were but outlaws, brutal desperadoes, wearing the king's uniform as a cloak and a shield."

"I fear, dear lady, the partiality which you have for the enemies of your king has somewhat dimmed the clearness of your judgment. However, I feel that I owe myself most severe censure for the cruel word which I have so unintentionally inflicted upon you. Had I sooner realized how deeply you are in love with this young Worthington, I should have taken pains to have kept from you the punishment which I feel it my duty to mete out to him."

"Is a woman's heart never to be swayed save by love?" Jane asked. "Can she never plead for justice without having her motives impugned? If I have spoken in behalf of Capt. Worthington, if I have besought you not to put into execution your cruel threat, I am impelled by motives of common humanity."

"Is this true, Jane?" Bessemer cried eagerly. "Is it so that you do not love him? Do you pledge me your honor on it?"

Jane drew back. "Pledge you my honor? No. If my simple word be not enough, where would I find the honor to pledge?"

Bessemer, torn between rapture and uncertainty, searched her face with jealous eyes. Surely, 'twere too fair a face to be aught but honest. "Ah, my ever ready-tongued Jane," he said, "you little know the weight your words have lifted from my breast. This one rebel have I feared I had more cause to dread than all the rebels in all the armies on this continent combined."

"Then that explains your severity to-night. I can well understand that one might be inclined to deal harshly with a person one feared; but since this poor Worthington is so humbly placed that to fear him would be to belittle yourself, surely mercy is easy."

Again did Bessemer regard her suspiciously. "An artful plea," he observed, "yet I am not so sure that this rebel is not still to be feared; though, could I have the safeguard of your love, I would fear nothing earthly. I would dwell too near Heaven for that. Come, Jane, you who can be so tenderly considerate of others, surely will not keep me longer in suspense. Tell me that you will answer 'yes' to the request I made this morning?"

"Dear colonel," replied Jane, "the man I marry must be humane as well as brave. Your bravery, none questions; your humanity, it remains for you to prove."

"Ah, madam," he returned, "it is well known that happiness is the great propagator of virtue. Grant me the happiness I seek, and you will find that my humanity will blossom in its sunshine. To clinch the argument, give me this hand and that young rebel shall not die at tomorrow's sunrise." He took her hand as he spoke and pressed it to his heart, but Jane withdrew it quickly.

"Surely," she observed coldly, "Col. Bessemer needs no bribe to spur him to an act of justice, and if he did, he would make the bribe his own reward."

I seek," he retorted flippantly, while his brow contracted with irritation, "unless, indeed, dear lady, you tipify yourself as virtue. But a truce to fencing; let us, to the question. Is it a bargain, or is it not? Is this young man to be reprieved through your sweet offices, or is he to hang at sunrise?"

Jane turned upon him angrily. "And do you suppose, sir," she demanded, "that I would give myself to a man so cruel as even to think of offering such a bargain? Never

If I marry you, it must be for what you are, not for what you offer. But," she added more adroitly, "I rely upon Col. Bessemer's mercy."

"I would, sweet pleader," he observed, "that it were possible I could reconcile it with my duty to do as you wish; but, alas, I feel that loyalty to my king will not admit of it. It is a matter of gratification to me, however, that, while your womanly compassion may be wounded, your deeper emotions will not be lacerated when the rising of to-morrow's sun sees the setting of young Worthington's."

His piercing eyes were upon her face, and Jane felt her composure giving way beneath them, for at length she perceived that he was in absolute earnest.

"At sunrise," she repeated in a choking voice, while her mind quickly calculated the shortness of the time. Ah, if she could but get a reprieve until to-morrow night, much might be accomplished during the intervening day. "Methinks, colonel, you choose a most inappropriate hour for so dark a deed. The blackest hues of midnight would better match the color of the act."

"A most wise suggestion, dear lady," Bessemer responded. "What say you to this midnight?" He drew forth his watch. It showed some minutes past 12. "Or, since that is impossible, the approaching hour of one? 'Tis done. I shall see to it."

"No, no," she cried passionately; "surely, surely, Col. Bessemer, you will not permit my thoughtless words to shorten the life of a helpless being. Do not, oh, I beseech you by all you hold sacred, do not deprive him of those few remaining hours of grace."

"The hour, madam," Bessemer answered, his relentless eyes holding hers, "is set for one."

An Infant Industry.

Lawrence county is reaching for trade in more ways than one. Millions of eggs, hundreds of thousands of chickens, hogs and cattle have been shipped from this county, and now some of our enterprising stockmen have turned their attention to goats. Last week Tom Burchett shipped six thirty ones to J. B. Bazell, of Ironton, whose presence was noted in the NEWS, and who is a thriving miller and farmer of Lawrence county Ohio.

There has been no little talking and writing about what the best milk goats can do for there are many breeds of them—the National Department has imported sixty-eight of these animals from Malta.

Most of the lot goes to the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station and will be cared for there with the object of seeing if such can be used for economical milk production in New England.

It is well known that the milk of these animals is "valuable for cheese making and for feeding to infants and invalids."

"If the goat can be kept with profit on the rougher New England pastures, it is possible that a new industry can be introduced."

It appears that they have had a prejudice against the goat in this country. Such was largely the way with Jersey cattle when they were first brought into Kentucky. Now they are everywhere here and but little is heard on the subject. A big place has been found for them in Kentucky. So the goat is reached.

They are discussing the goat for New England. The creature is being thought of and found to be a useful animal. "Possibly," says one, "we have reached a point where much help can be given us by this humble four-footed friend."

Home Circle Column.

A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

The best way to stop a wagging tongue is to let it wag until people are tired of listening to it.

Have a bright bouquet of flowers in each room of your home to cheer and brighten it and its inmates.

Many a man pines for a garden this time of the year, and when every thing is ready for the work turns the whole proposition over to his wife.

When men build a new boat and wish to test its strength they turn its prow up stream against the current. They do not let it drift with the tide. So it is with our lives. If we wish to try our strength we must turn our faces to the current and face the tide.

The life of the world is strenuous, and the door of the home should shut out the storm and stress, but it should not shut out new and wholesome and inspiring influences. It should stand wide in hospitable welcome to friends. The home life that is narrow and selfish is dull and enervating.

There is not such a great amount of happiness in the world, even at the best, that we should risk losing it by our own misdeeds and ill nature. There are many people in life who may be likened to a briar bush, when one comes too near he gets stung by thorns; but each individual should remember that he himself is sometimes thorny and apt to inflict wounds. Therefore each one should be more lenient toward the other, remembering that the more one strives against such things the deeper they penetrate and the more painful wounds they make. A spark of fire if left to itself will eventually die out, but if it be nursed and fuel added, behold, what a great conflagration ensues. Forbearance is the only remedy, and although everyone may not possess the unexampled patience of Job, yet what little things have may be cultivated till things will be made to go smoothly and easily.

A friend of ours told a fine Jersey cow the other day—tied her too long. She got tangled up in the rope and broke her neck—a case of too much rope. How many instances there are in life that are counterparts of the above! The cherished of our hearts, our own flesh and blood, are often allowed to gradually slip away from us and out from under our control, all because we love them so much and hate to restrict their pleasures or say "no" to them. They are cut a little bit late, but they are our boys and girls and they will be all right. Perhaps later on it is the public dance, a case of beer and a game of cards with a ten cent ante, and the first thing we know all is lost, and we awake to a realization of the fact, only too late, that it was just like our friend's cow—a case of too much rope. Be boys and girls with your boys and girls, and at the same time be manly men and womanly women, and your boys and girls will grow up like you, be proud of you and you of them.

THE HOME.

Married people would be happier if home trials were never told to the neighbors.

If they kissed and made up after every quarrel.

If household expenses were proportioned to receipts.

If they tried to be as agreeable as in courtship days.

If each would try and be a support and comfort to the other.

If each remembered the other was a human being, not an angel.

If women were as kind to their husbands as they were to their lovers.

If fuel and provisions were laid in during the high tide of summer work.

If both parties remembered that they married for worse as well as better.

If men were as thoughtful for their wives as they were for their sweethearts.

If there were fewer silk and velvet costumes for the street and more plain, tidy house dresses.

If wives and husbands would take some pleasure as they go along, and not degenerate into mere toiling machines. Recreation is necessary to keep the heart in its place, and to get along without it is a big mistake.

If men would remember that women can't always be smiling, who have to cook the dinner, answer the bell half a dozen times, get rid of a neighbor who has dropped in, tend to a sick baby, tie up the cut finger of a two-year-old, gather up the playthings of a four-year-old, tie up the head of a six-year-old on skates, and get an eight-year-old ready for school, to say nothing of sweeping, cleaning, etc. A woman with all these to contend with may claim it a privilege to look and feel a little tired sometimes, and a word of sympathy would not be too much to expect from the man, who, during the honeymoon, wouldn't let her carry as much as a sunshade.

There is perhaps no place where courage is more needed than in the home life by the tired housewife and busy mother. Her daily work is but a repetition of many a yesterday. She is but human and must sometimes feel worn and discouraged, but a quiet confidence that she shall be able to perform whatever is right and necessary generally carries us safely through difficulties, keeping us strong and calm amid the most trying duties. No one fills a place of greater responsibility, nor one more worthy of the highest honors, than the wise and faithful mother and house-keeper, who loves her work and acts on the principle that "it is not what we do but how, that makes us great." Her example is worthy of imitation by the noblest of earth. There is nothing more beautiful in life than the brave spirit who thus lovingly performs her part of the labors of earth, asking no greater reward than the consciousness of having done her duty well and led her household to Christ. Priceless, indeed, must be the peace that stills her heart in the hour of death, and endless rest awaits the tired hands when life is done.

"Beautiful hands are those that do work that is earnest, and brave and true."

Moment by moment the long day thru "Beautiful twilight at set of sun, Beautiful goal with race well run, Beautiful rest with work well done."

"Beautiful grave, where grasses creep, Where brown leaves fall and drifts lie deep, Over worn-out hands—oh, beautiful sleep."

Blackburn's Attitude.

This Post, the Louisville Republican evening paper, gets the following from Washington:

Washington, May 28.—Senator Blackburn's attitude toward the Kentucky Governorship is causing great consternation among certain school of Kentucky Democratic politicians. These men have been given the nervous jitters by the developments of the last week, and if the tension keeps up goodness only knows what will happen.

The trouble started when Representative Frank Hopkins slipped a cog and came out in an interview booming Blackburn for Governor. Hopkins claims he wasn't the man who slipped a cog. He puts the blame on the newspaper fraternity, and says he didn't know he was to be quoted; but, however that may be, he is charged up with the interview and has to stand for it.

The Blackburn gubernatorial boom was rattling down the pike at a lively clip when the sages of the Democratic press at Louisville sought to head it off by pointing out the utter improbability that such a notion had ever entered Senator Blackburn's head. Perish the thought, said they.

Hardly had the ink on the papers containing the cold water articles become dry, when Senator Blackburn threw a scare about the size of a mountain into his apprehensive Democratic friends by giving out an interview, printed in the Evening Post last Friday, in which he kicked a few slats out of the Beckham machine and declared that whoever is nominated for Governor must be free from the taint and smell of the machine.

There are certain politicians in the old Bluegrass State who would be supremely happy right now if they could get a promise from Senator Blackburn that he will do no more talking and put a padlock on the mouths of his over-enthusiastic friends.

COSTLY KINDLING.

What Happened to the Hoard of a New York Farmer's Wife.

Few people are so poor that they do not some times have money which they do not wish to spend immediately. Every one has this practical problem to solve: How may I keep money in safety till the time that I want it?

The most natural solution of the problem is to put the money in a bank. It is the business of banks to keep money for people. Money in a bank is safer than anywhere else. There are many people, however, who never think of putting money in banks. For them a place of hiding is the one thing to be thought of. Now, in hiding anything, the one supreme consideration is to put it where no one will be likely to look for it, or even happen upon it by accident.

A certain farmer's wife, near Alfred, N. Y., had two hundred dollars in legal tender notes, and decided to conceal it somewhere.

She considered many places, and finally hit upon the parlor stove. It was summertime, and there was no fire in the front room.

No one, she thought, would be likely to look in the stove for money. She was correct in her supposition. No one did think of looking in the stove for money, and there her treasure remained in safety—till the winds of autumn demanded artificial heat in the front part of the house.

No thief ever laid hands upon those two hundred hard-earned dollars. The little roll of bills was skillfully hidden, but one chilly day there was a fire inside the safety-deposit box.

When the farmer's wife remembered her money, it was too late. The place to deposit your money is in The Louisville National Bank, which has a capital of $50,000.00, surplus and profits of $5,000.00, and a security of $105,000.00 for depositors. Insurance of every kind against loss. Our business is conducted upon a conservative basis. Security is the first thing to consider in placing your money for safe keeping.

We are at your service and have every modern facility for handling your business. You are invited to open an account with us.

My Hair Ran Away

Don't have a falling out with your hair. It might leave you! Then what? That would mean thin, scraggly, uneven, rough hair. Keep your hair at home! Fasten it tightly to your scalp! You can easily do it with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is something more than a simple hair dressing. It is a hair medicine, a hair tonic, a hair food.

The best kind of a testimonial—Sold for over sixty years.

Made by J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Also manufactured at SANSAPARILLA, PILLS, CHERRY PECTORAL.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

Greenup, Ky., May 30.—James Lutzer, a laborer, fell from the top of a dry house at the Tygart fire brick works and died from concussion of the brain in twenty-four hours.

Edward Pierce, a Greenup county sportsman, came to town Saturday, whipped him a man in self-defense, paid the defeated one's fine like a gentleman, and made his plug win about seventy-five dollars from the Grayson sports in a horse race. There is nothing slow about Sir Edward.

Greenup, Ky.—Frank M. Griffith, County Commissioner for Greenup county Home-coming Week has appointed the following assistants: Deputy Commissioner, Prof. L. R. McCarty; hostess, Mrs. Florence H. Leslie; maid of honor, Miss Lucy H. Lacock. All are residents of Greenup.

Owingsville, Ky., June 2.—Mrs. Mollie Parks, of Farmer, Rowan county, Ky., nine miles from here, has received a check for $500 from the executor of the estate of the late Marshal Field, of Chicago. Mrs. Park was a first cousin of Field's first wife, who was a native of Carter county.

The cases against the Black Cannel Coal Company were disposed of Friday. That of Thos. Nance vs. the Kentucky Black Cannel Coal Co. for personal injury alleged to have been received resulted in a verdict for $2,000 damages to Nance. In the other case peremptory instructions were given by the Court and the case dismissed, after the plaintiff's evidence had been heard.—Independent.

According to reports that have been received here the upper end of Wayne county has been invaded by bears, and the animals are reported to be quite plentiful in the heavily wooded part of that section. Wayne farmers are on the trail of the Bruin, and it is probable that a number of Huntington sportsmen will join them in their hunt.

It is taken from the Huntington Advertiser, What is it worth?—Mingo Republican.

Prestonsburg, Ky., June 1.—News reached here last evening of the death of Sam Begley, at his home on Beaver creek. Mr. Begley's death was a great shock to his family and friends, he not having been sick. His death was sudden, suffering only a few hours with a pain in his side. Mr. Begley was well and favorably known in our town, having gone to school here several terms, and was a young man of excellent character, and liked by all who knew him.

Two prisoners escaped from the new jail on last Thursday night by digging their way out through the wall of the building. When Jailer Ketchum locked the prisoners in the cells Thursday night he thought that all had been locked in, but these two "side stepped" in some mysterious manner and were only confined in the day hall. One of them, McClelland, was confined on a charge of felony, and the other was in on a misdemeanor charge.—Wayne News.

Ketchum is a good name for a Jailer, but Holdum is better.

Warren D. Auxler, living near here, and who has a position as walking boss for the Dunn Construction Co., railroad contractors in W. Va., shot and instantly killed two Italians at the company's camp in Fayette county, W. Va., last week. Guy W. Rice, a member of the firm for whom Mr. Auxler is working, was an eye witness to the shooting and says Mr. Auxler acted entirely in self defense. He says Mr. Auxler was attacked by a gang of Italian laborers and would have been killed outright had he not fired on the crowd. He was slightly injured by being cut by a knife in the hands of an Italian. Mr. Auxler came home but returned this week to surrender himself to the authorities. Mr. Rice says he will be acquitted.—Paintsville Herald.

James P. Layne vs. James Preston Power—Filed May 23, 1896.—(Not to be reported).—Appeal from Floyd Circuit Court. Opinion of the court by John D. Carroll, commissioner, reversing.

Estate—Right of executor of estate to sue in his individual capacity after settling his accounts.—It is well settled in this State that a personal representative of an estate may charge himself in the settlement of an estate with a note due the estate and thereupon become the owner and have the right to recover on it. This being true, there is no reason why the personal representative may not pay the heirs and distributees herein the amount of the note and thereby become the owner of it and sue for its payment in his individual capacity.

James Coble for appellant; W. S. Harkins for appellee. Turner vs. Johnson, Floyd; affirmed.

Uncle Sol D. Kirk, at the ripe old age of 94 years, died at his home on Bear creek a few days ago. He cast his first vote for Andrew Jackson for President, and was probably the oldest man in Boyd county.

Scottown, a village twenty miles north of Ironton, with a population of 200, was washed away Tuesday morning. Not a house was left on its foundation. Mrs. Fayre and daughter were drowned. Bridges were washed away and telephone wires are down.

Mr. Layne, of Guyandotte, father of Dr. P. C. Layne, of this city, while doing some civil engineer work up near Laynesville, Floyd county, a few days ago, unearthed a Confederate bayonet which had laid buried there for 45 years. This was found on the scene of the battle of Ivy Mountain, where General Williams (Confederate) and General Nelson (Federal) and their forces had a setto. The bayonet is in a wonderful state of preservation.—Independent.
